

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. WILLIAM MARSH OF PLAINFIELD, CT., AND FOUR GENERATIONS OF HIS DESCENDANTS.

In the History of the First Church, Stonington, Ct., we find the following records:

"Elizabeth, wife Wm. Marsh, admitted to ch. Aug. 24, 1690.

"Wm. Marsh admitted to ch. May 14, 1693.

"CHILDREN BAPTIZED."

"Sept. 7, 1690, Mary, William, Thomas, and James.

"June 19, 1692, Elizabeth.

"June 24, 1694, Ann."

We have statements that of these children William d. at Plainfield, Ct., Jan. 28, 1759, æ. 74. He was then b. abt. 1685, and Thomas has on tombstone: "d. Mar. 19, 1753, in his 67th yr."; therefore b. 1687, and, taking the children in the order of their names on ch. record, we have:

WILLIAM MARSH 1 (brother of James who was beheaded in Eng.) of Stonington, was in the Narragansett Swamp fight of 1675, m. Elizabeth Yeomans of Stonington, prob. abt. 1682 (?). They had b. :

1. Mary, abt. 1683 (?).	5. Elizabeth, abt. 1692, m. Mr. Utley, and lived in "Canada Parish," Windham, Ct.
2. William, abt. 1684.	6. Ann, abt. 1694.
3. Thomas, abt. 1687.	7. Matthias, 1695 or later.
4. James, abt. 1690.

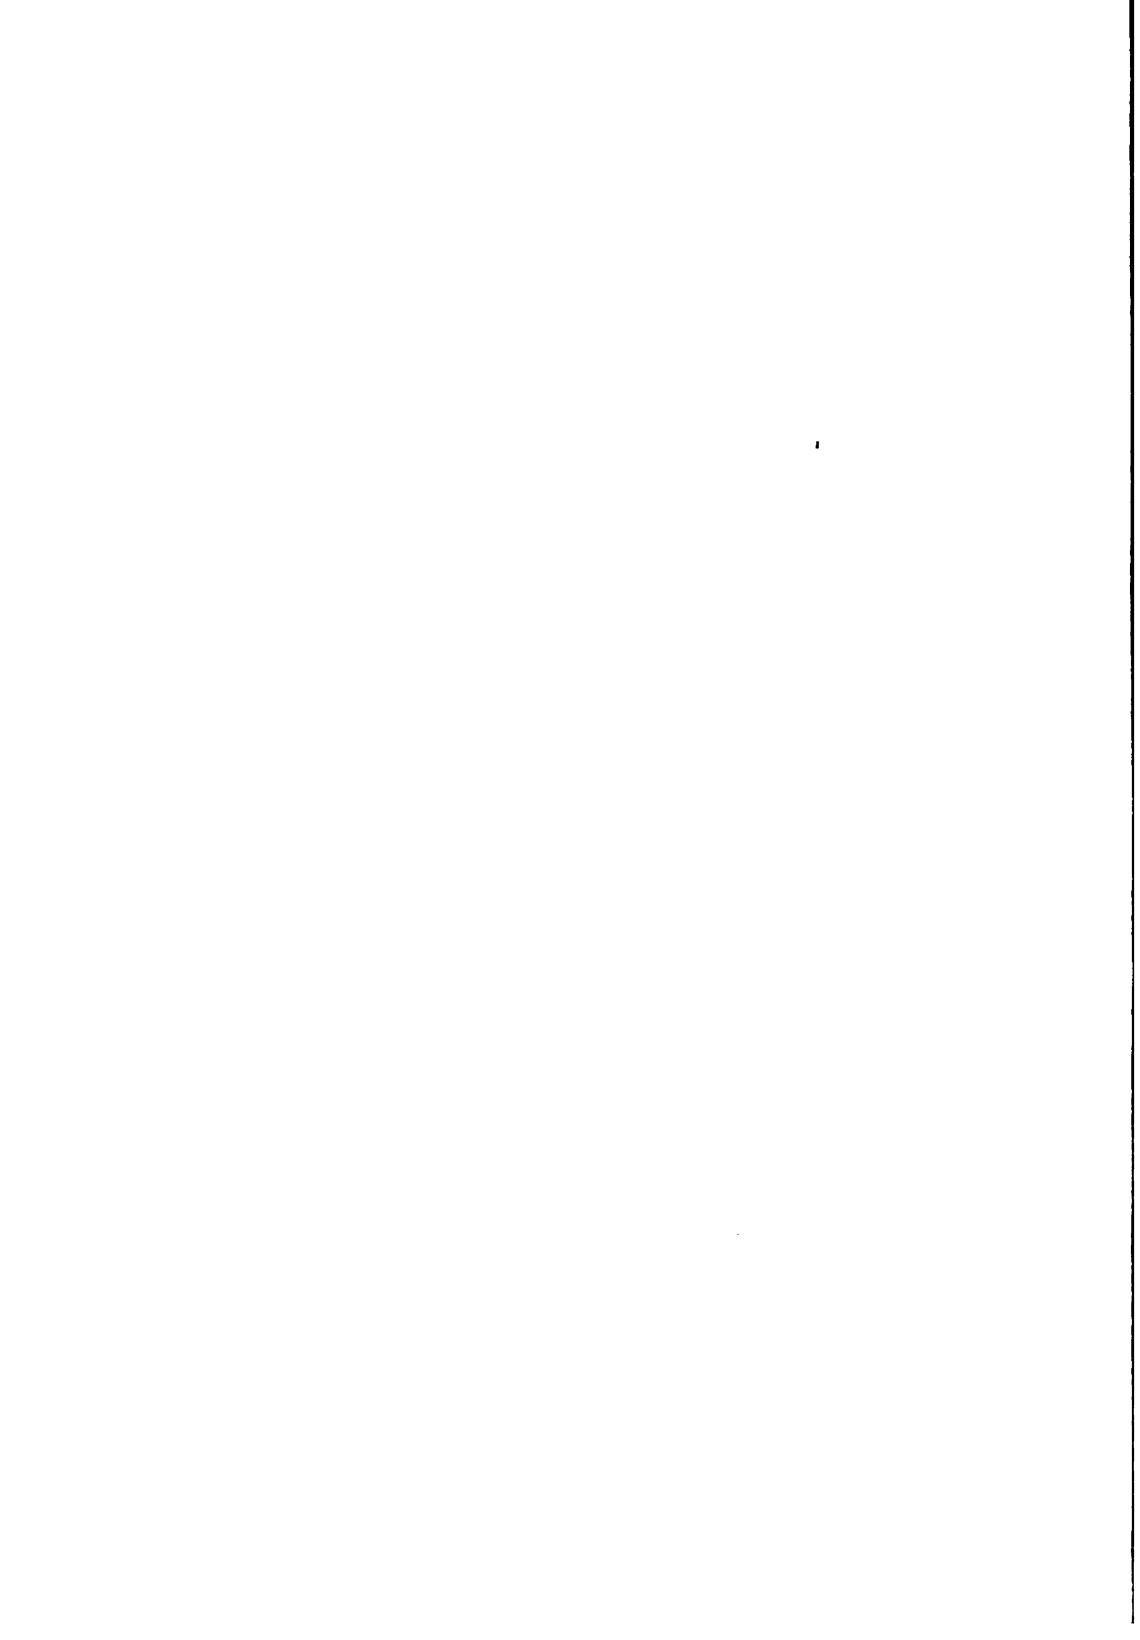

Perhaps 8. (?) Joseph, who was at Voluntown with James, 1725.

The name of Matthias does not appear on Stonington church records, making it probable that William, 1. took his family to Plainfield after Elizabeth and before Matthias was born, say 1694 to 1695, although he explored there with Ed. Yeomans abt. 1690.

SECOND AND THIRD GENERATIONS.

WILLIAM 2 (Wm. 1) seems to have remained in Plainfield, Ct., and was in French war, 1756-7.

JOSEPH (?) and James 2 (Wm. 1) were at Voluntown in 1725. Who can tell us something of their descendants?

THOMAS MARSH 2 (Wm. 1) was deacon of church at Canada Parish, Windham, afterwards called Hampton, in 1730 and 1738, preached at Mansfield, Ct., where he was pastor-elect of "Separatist Ch.," was imprisoned Jan., 1746, for preaching without a license, but ordained there same year, 1746. He m. (?) Eliza ——, and they had b.:

1. Thomas, Jan. 24, 1713.	7. William, Dec. 23, 1725.
2. John, Dec. 11, 1715.	8. Phineas, Dec. 16, 1727.
3. Elihu, July 12, 1717.	9. Simeon, Jan. 15, 1729.
4. Amos, June 7, 1719.	10. Hannah, Oct. 17, 1730.
5. Joseph, Apr. 9, 1721.	11. Jacob, Aug. 19, 1733.
6. Eunice, Feb. 17, 1724.	12. Matthias, Sept. 25, 1736.

MATTHIAS 2 (Wm. 1) of Coventry, Ct., m. —— Brigham, rem. first to Dover, Dutchess Co., N. Y., where he held large tracts of land, thence removed to Dorset, Vt. They had b.:

1. William.

THIRD AND FOURTH GENERATIONS.

JOHN 3 (Thomas 2, Wm. 1) of Windham, Ct., m. (1) Sept. 25, 1736, Sarah Martin. They had b.:

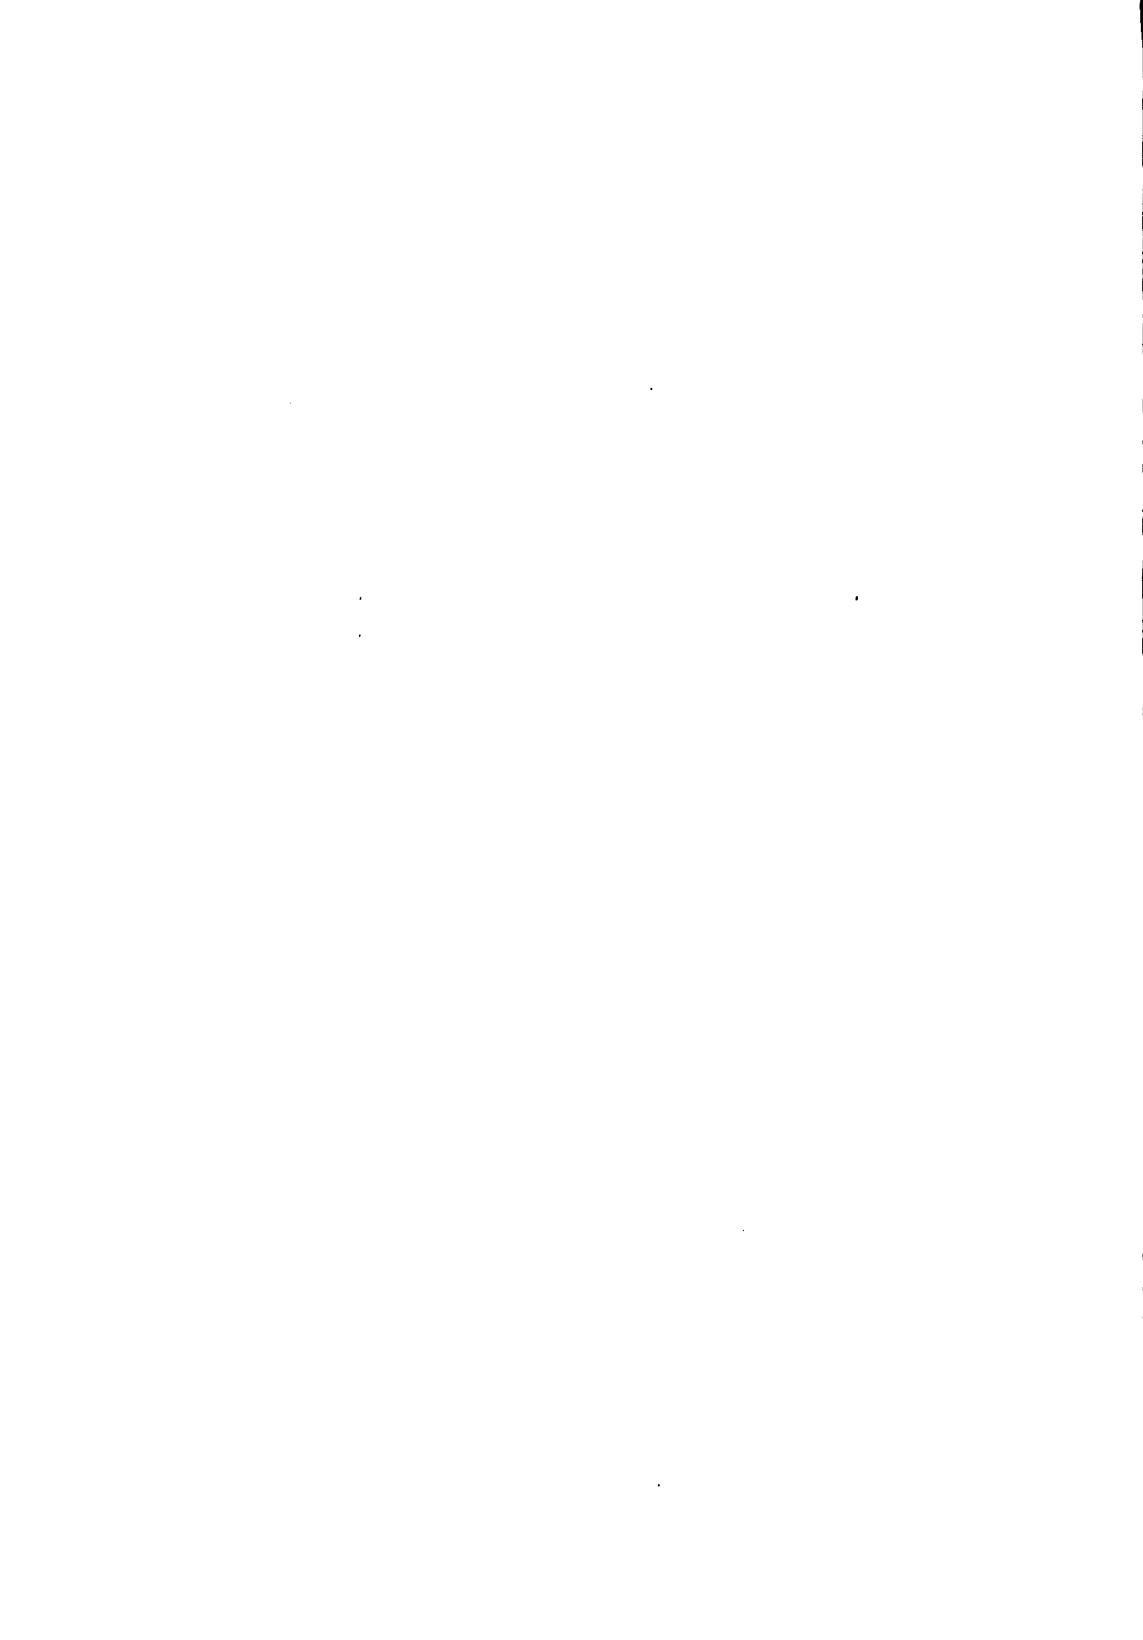

1. Phineas, June 29, 1737.	4. Lucy, Apr. 9, 1742.
2. Esther, Sept. 10, 1738.	5. Susannah, Dec. 2, 1743.
3. Sarah, Mar. 20, 1740.

With some question, I add, he seems to be the John of New Milford (Ct.) History, who, perhaps, (2) (?) "m. Mary ——, settled at Dover, N. Y., and he and wife d. before 1765. Children:

"John, Abraham; Sarah m. Dan. Luke; Susanna m. Agrippa Martin; Mary, and Hannah."

ELIHU MARSH 3 (Thos. 2, Wm. 1) of Mansfield and Fairfield, Ct., commonly called, as minister, "Elder Elihu," m. Savial Abbey, d. in Fairfield, where he was living Sept. 30, 1765, when he bought his first land in New Milford, Ct. Old records say: "Marsh, Elihu, m. Zeruiah Abbe, May 10, 1736. Issue: Elihu, Jun., b. Sept. 17, 1737." They had b.:

1. Elihu, Sept. 17, 1737.	7. Samuel, Oct. 8, 1752.
2. Saravia, May 8, 1740.	8. Joseph, Apr. 20, 1754.
3. Mary, June 12, 1742.	9. Hannah, Feb. 20, 1757.
4. Eunice, Dec. 6, 1744.	10. Ruth, Aug. 31, 1759.
5. Lydia, Apr. 11, 1747.	11. Benjamin D., May 10, 1762.
6. John, Aug. 4, 1749.	12. Amos, Sept. 8, 1764.

AMOS MARSH 3 and JACOB MARSH 3 (Thos. 2, Wm. 1) appear in Clarendon, Vt. in 1773, also with nephews Daniel and William at Clarendon in 1769 then called, as part of New York, Socialburg. AN ABRAM MARSH called "the ablest Yorker," "driven from Shaftesbury" by Vermonters, was prob. the Abraham of Dover, N. Y. son of John 3 (Thos. 2, Wm. 1).

HANNAH MARSH 3 (Thos. 2, Wm. 1) m. May 22, 1751, Rev. Eliphalet Wright, had nine children and d. at Hinsdale, Mass. Jan. 2, 1815.

JOSEPH MARSH 3 (Thos. 2, Wm. 1) was still in Canada Parish, Windham in 1763, "threaded his way from Canterbury, Ct. by marked trees" to Worthington, Mass. where he was selectman 1771, 1772 and 1777, served in Rev. war, prob? rem. with his younger sons to Hinesburg, Vt. in 1788. He m. (1) April 29, 1748 Anna Stedman, b. 1729, dau. Dea. Thos. and Anna. They had b.:

1. Daniel, April 5, 1744, bap. April 8, d. April 26, 1758, æ. 9 years, 2 months and 21 days.
2. Anna, Nov. 14, 1745, bap. Dec. 15, m. April 25, 1765, Eleazer Wright and had twelve children.

APPENDIX.

[By the kindness of a friend we are allowed to add, without any expense, the following account of our late reunion].

MARSH FAMILY REUNION.

LAKE PLEASANT, July 22d, 1886.

The three days' reunion of the Marsh family which was begun here Tuesday, ended to-day. The interest has been fervent and those who have attended depart well pleased to have met and exchanged family greetings.

There were representatives from New England, New York and other states, including Col. Lucius B. Marsh of Boston, Josiah D. Marsh of Hadley, John E. Marsh of Hartford, Riverius Marsh of New Brunswick, N. J., Horatio N. Marsh of Joliet, Ill., James Marsh of Peabody, E. J. Marsh of Leominster, Mass., the president Rev. D. W. Marsh of Amherst, Mansir Marsh of Belmont, Mass., the venerable Simeon B. Marsh of Spencer, and others.

The gathering was the means of cementing much good feeling among Marshmen and was enjoyed by all. The exercises Tuesday morning opened with prayer by Rev. D. W. Marsh of Amherst, and the report of Secretary J. Johnson was accepted together with the report of Mr. R. Marsh, chairman of the finance committee. J. Dwight Marsh in his address produced a quaint historical document of particular interest to this growing family, which now numbers over 10,000 in this country, the will of John Marsh, who came from Hartford and took up his abode in Hadley.

Particular emphasis was laid on the fact that between 1638 and 1700 various branches started in this country, viz.: From John of Salem, John of Boston, John of Hartford, Alexander of Braintree, George of Hingham, William of Plainfield and Samuel of New Haven, all of whom have left large families of descendants, many of whom are well known. A book has been prepared by E. J. Marsh of the family of George of Hingham, which is now in press. John E. Marsh of Hartford, and E. J. Marsh of Leominster gave a few family reminiscences. It was voted to give the gathering the dignity of a name, and it will be known hereafter as the Marsh Family Association.

A committee of arrangements was appointed with Mr. D. C. Marsh as chairman, and the meeting then adjourned for dinner.

At 1.30 p. m. the family reassembled and several selections were sung from Gospel Hymns, and an original ode, to the tune "America," after which the president, Rev. D. W. Marsh of Amherst, Mass., made a brief address of welcome. In these remarks he stated that last year one of the family had presented a record box of rose-wood for use in filing away letters and records pertaining to various branches of the family, and that this year it was full of a mass of valuable historical and biographical matter, and that another would soon be needed. He then read various papers and letters from the box relating to John Marsh of Salem and his descendants, George Marsh of Hingham and his descendants, Alexander Marsh of Braintree, Mass., and descendants of John Marsh of Boston, Wm. Marsh of Plainfield, Ct., and also a bundle of papers in regard to the Montague Marshes, who are descendants of John Marsh of Hartford, Ct.

The principal address of the day was by J. D. Marsh of Hadley, which in the main was an historical and biographical review of John Marsh of Hartford and Hadley. It was an interesting paper and a valuable contribution to the records of the family.

Remarks were then made by Horatio J. Marsh of Joliet, Ill., and by Riverius Marsh of New Brunswick, N. J. A letter was read from Edward Stewart of New York.

Wednesday forenoon Col. Lucius B. Marsh of Boston delivered an exhaustive and valuable address giving the early history of Salem and the genealogy of John Marsh who landed there in 1633. He corrected some errors in dates and gave an outline of the various branches of the family tree. He exhibited some of the commissions issued by the kings of England to his ancestors. The address was highly appreciated by the company present, the most of whom are eager seekers after the early history of the Marsh family. A vote of thanks was given the speaker.

The rest of the day was taken up with discussing various matters of business. A resolution from the committee of finance and publication was adopted, the gist of which was that money should be raised at once for the publication of an outline of the different branches, and that a copy of the publication be sent to every member of the Family Association.

These officers were chosen: President, Rev. Dr. D. W. Marsh of Amherst; vice-presidents, Wm. T. Marsh, Litchfield, Ct., Chas. E. Marsh, New Milford, Ct., John E. Marsh, Hartford, Ct., David C. Marsh, Montague, L. B. Marsh, Boston, Riverius Marsh, New Brunswick, N. J., H. N. Marsh, Joliet, Ill., James Marsh, Cleveland, O., Luther R. Marsh, New York City; secretary, Jonathan Johnson, Greenfield; treasurer, E. B. Marsh, Amherst. It was decided to hold the next meeting at Hartford about August 1st of next year, and the president, secretary and R. Marsh were appointed as the committee of arrangements. On this day and the day following several short addresses were made of much interest to those present, those participating being Riverius Marsh, E. J. Marsh, Lucius B. Marsh, J. Johnson and others. Letters were also read from several who were unable to attend but who felt a great interest in the work that is being undertaken of unearthing the early history of their ancestors.

ADDRESS OF J. DWIGHT MARSH OF HADLEY.

Mr. President, and ladies and gentlemen, I am asked to speak from Old Hadley. I am a resident of that town, and my ancestors, the fathers, back to the John Marsh who married Anne Webster, have all been residents of Hadley. I say the John Marsh who married Anne Webster, because, while I have found a great many John Marshs, I have found but one who married Anne Webster. And of the mothers all but one have been descendants of the first settlers of Hadley. As for several years after the town was settled no one was admitted as an inhabitant without vote of the town, whether a man was allowed to go out of town for a wife without leave, I do not know; but to make it right for the future generations her husband records on her tombstone in brackets that she was "descended from pious parents"; who they were I do not know. This was the mother of the Rev. Elisha, of whom we heard last year.

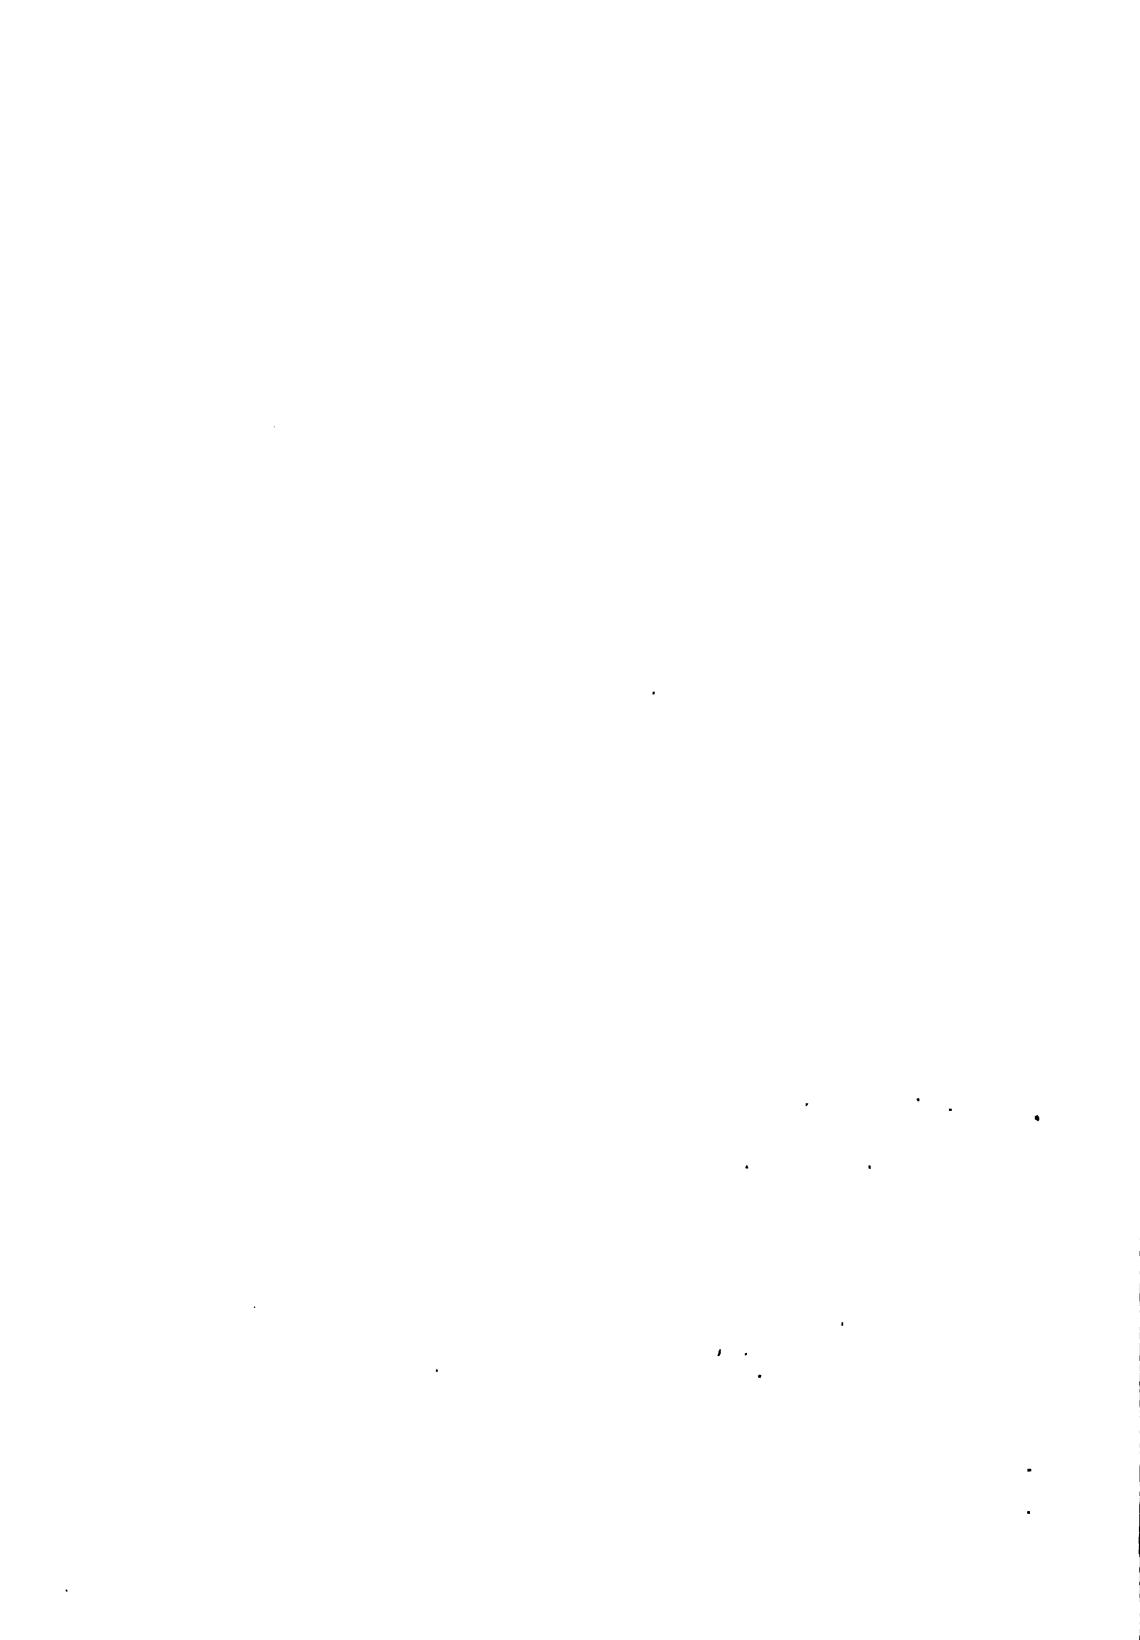

In my house I have a picture representing Hadley attacked by the Indians in 1675, and the majestic figure of Goffe standing in the foreground rallying the panic stricken inhabitants. But, says the historian of to-day, "all tradition; no Indians nearer Hadley than Deerfield that day." I have looked at the records of the town of that time and find that it was a time of great trouble for fear of the enemy, as they call them. Votes were passed that the fortifications be strengthened ; brush be cut down in all home lots, so as not to be a hiding place for the enemy ; that no less than 40, or more than 50, men should go outside the fortifications to gather the crops in the meadows, and they should dispose themselves in the best manner for protection ; that all males over 16 go armed to church, etc. A garrison was kept there in the winter of 1675 and summer of 1676. Had the Indians been successful, as at Deerfield, and Goffe been tomahawked, there would have been no need of secrecy, but I notice that Goffe was on the winning side, whether as one of the judges of Charles 1st, or in a sword contest in Boston or New Haven, or fighting the Indians in Hadley ; and to have published the story at that time would have been death to protectors as well as the protected. Now Peter Tilton, one of the protectors, was a very modest man, and would naturally object to that way of being taken off. I notice that in recording the list of Selectmen for the town, while giving every other man his full title as Capt., Lieut., Sergt., Cornet, etc., he would write his own name last, and simply as P. T., although entitled to more titles than any other man in town.

The Rev. Samuel Hopkins, writing in 1793 to President Stiles of New Haven, speaks of the tradition in the family of the Marshs ; John Marsh being one of the Selectmen in 1675, would know the facts in the case, and thus very likely the tradition would be handed down in the family. And President Stiles speaks of meeting in Wethersfield a Mrs. Porter, a sensible and judicious woman, a daughter of Mr. Ebenezer Marsh, born next door to Peter Tilton's, and of her story in relation to the judges. Thus the Marshs are brought in for their share in these traditions.

Another historical fact in which I took some interest was the passing of Burgoyne's army through the town, and while here Burgoyne presenting a sword to Gen. Porter. I saw in a Springfield paper this summer that the army passed through Springfield. Springfield had her Bay path, but Hadley had also her Bay road, and both led to Boston. Now in this instance no one's life was in danger, if the truth were known, and I have been fortunate in having a chance to look over a diary, kept in Hadley from 1740 to 1780, not indeed by a Marsh but by one whose descendants are entitled to a place in this gathering, as his wife was Miriam Cook, the daughter of Lieut. Samuel Cook and Ann, daughter of Jonathan Marsh. In it he says, "Oct. 22, 1777, William returns home from the taking of Burgoyne with 5200 men, near Fort Edward." "Oct. 29, prisoners pass this week; viz., about half Burgoyne's army taken at Saratoga by Gen. Gates;" "Nov. 8th, one of the prisoners passing dies in this town;" "10th, another prisoner dies." He speaks of noises heard thus: "thunder, like guns," and "July 5th, 1777, a noise like cannon heard, whether thunder or not." We have doubtless all heard of the dark day about this time, in which people were greatly frightened, and it is said one old lady exclaimed "Oh dear, the day of judgment is come, and Elly is off in the northern army without a nutcake in his pocket," and as she could not help him she would do what she could and she calls to Betty to get the geese in, and having made all snug she bides her time. On her monument I read,

When the last trumpet sounds,
Arise, come forth ye dead,
Shall be the call to her and all
That sleep in cosy beds."

I have the old family Bible in my possession, and its well thumbed pages attest that it was not kept as a parlor ornament. Another question in which the Marsh family are interested is, Did John Marsh stay in Old Hadley? Says the Hadley History: John Marsh was one of the first settlers of Hadley, but removed thence, first to Northampton,* and then to Hartford, where he died in 1688. The first notice of John Marsh, which I find in the Hadley records, is at the first town meeting held at Warner's house, Oct. 8th, 1660, "Agreed that Jo Marsh hath his house lot with his father, Mr. Webster, of Mr. Webster's, and he to have eight acres allowed for it within the fence, and he to come up at spring next." They had cast lots for their land in Feb. of 1660, and Mr. Webster drew No. 19, and John Marsh No. 34. I think he came up in 1661, as in December John Marsh and Will Webster engage for Robt. Webster. He has his lands recorded the 19th of June, 1674, as John Marsh, Sen., and as the third John was born in 1668 there were three generations of that name, probably, in town in 1674. In 1675, John Marsh was one of the Selectmen, whether senior or junior I do not know. This is the only time I find his name as a town officer, while the names of his sons, Jonathan and Daniel, recorded first as Jonathan and Daniel and then as Lieut. Jonathan and Sergt. Daniel, and lastly as Mr., which title they have on their tombstones, are on every page of

* It is an interesting fact that in the record of original members of the first church in Northampton formed in 1661 the name of John Marsh is the second on the list. But Hadley and Northampton are only three miles apart. D. W. M.

Hudley History from 1682 to 1715. The next time I find John Marsh's name is in the Probate office at Northampton, March 3d, 1687.

"A true copy of the last will and testament of John Marsh of Hadley, who dyed at Windsor, presented at the Court at Northampton, the 4th of December, 1688.

I, John Marsh, of Hadley, in the county of Hampshire, in New England, being very sensible of mine own frailty and mortality, yet through the mercy of God, of sound mind and memory at present, doe make this my last will and Testament as follows: I commit my selfe soule and body into the hands of the Almighty and Eternal God whose I am, and into the arms of my Redeemer the Lord Jesus Christ, in whom I desire steadfastly to belong, and on whom do repose and rest alone for righteousness life and salvation, leaving my body to be interred with a comely burial.

And for the outward estate the Lord hath blessed me withal, my will is, that after my just debts are paid, and funeral expenses discharged, that then

I give to my son, John Marsh, five pounds.

I give to my son, Jonathan Marsh, all my Gold.

I give to my son, Daniel Marsh, my two Cob Irons.

I give to my daughter, Hannah Loomis, alias Marsh, thirty pounds, unless I pay a part of it before my decease, n'th, if so then so much shall be discounted from the Legacy.

I give to my son, Samuel Marsh all my lands within the township of Hadley.

I give to my daughter, Lydia Marsh, my green Rug.

I give to my grandson Baker, of Northampton, five pounds, when he shall attayne to the age of one and twenty years

I give and bequeath to my daughter, Lydia Marsh, twenty pounds.

And all said Legacies, my will is, that my Executors see faithfully discharged. And I do constitute and appoint my loving sons, John Marsh and Samuel Marsh, to be Executors to this my will annulling and making voide all former wills at any time by me willed or bequeathed.

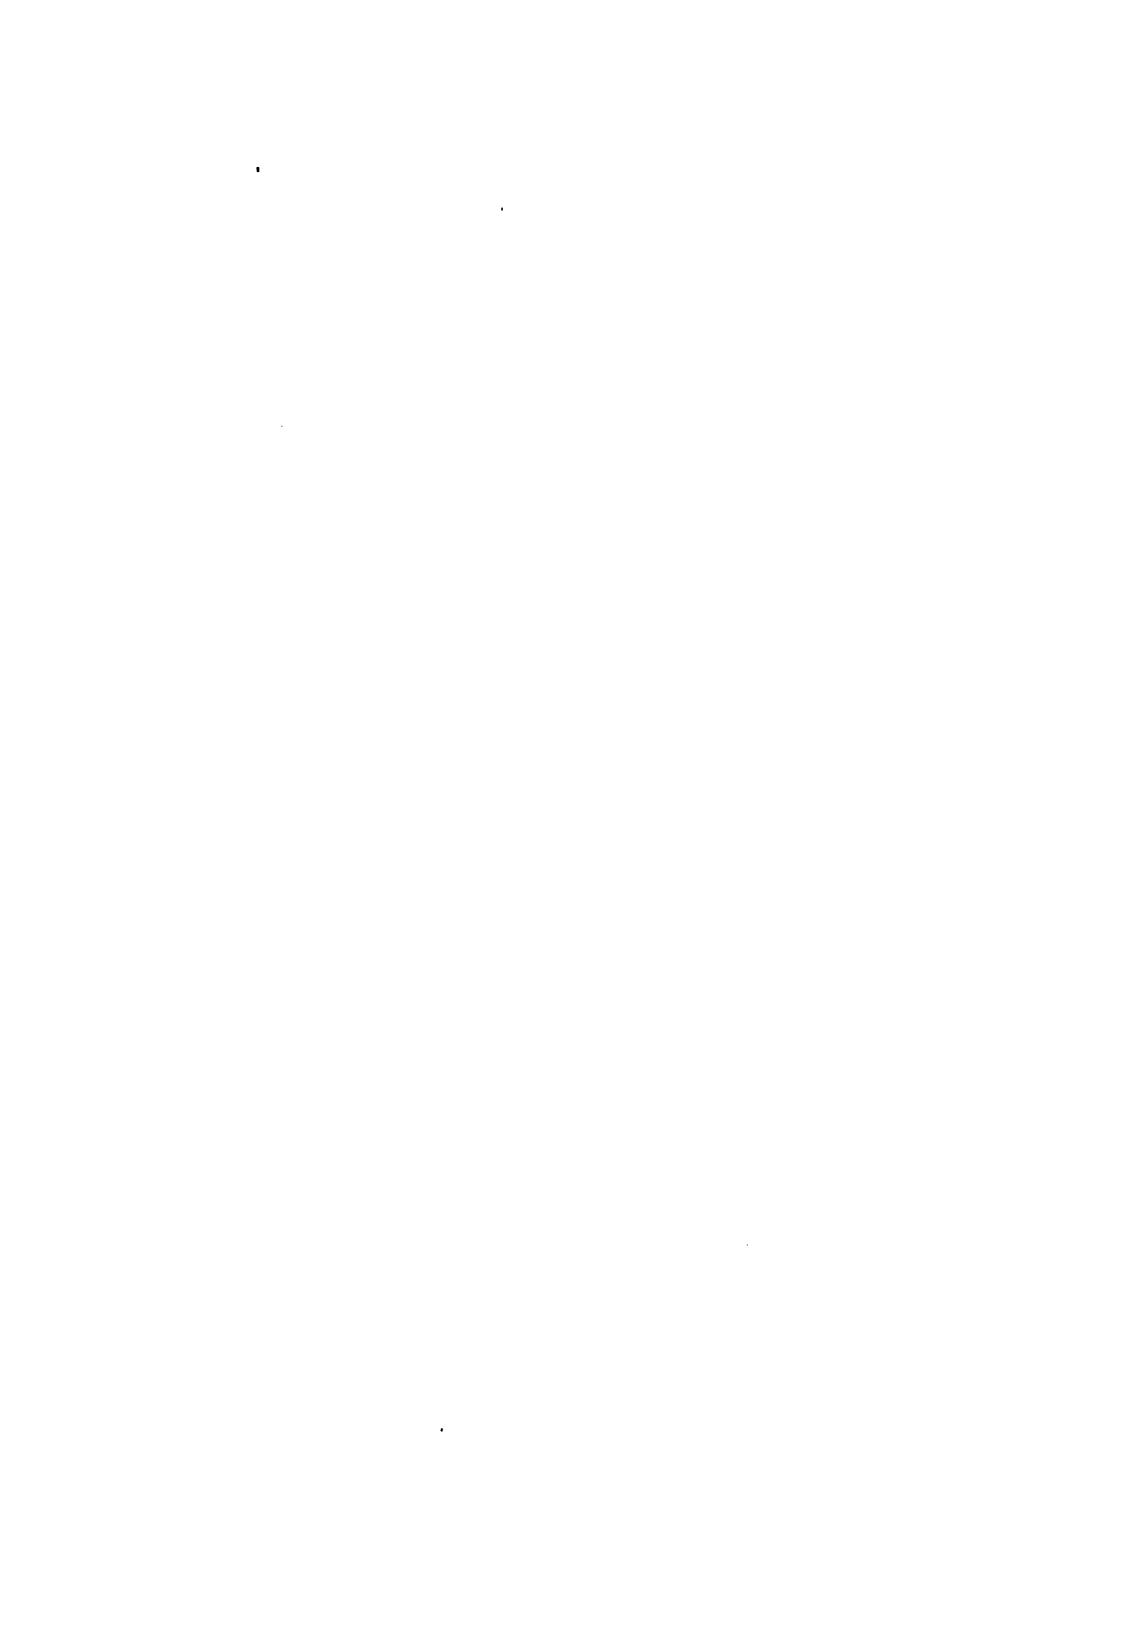

JOHN MARSH.

Sealed and subscribed in the presence of

THOMAS HOVEY,

THOMAS HEDD."

You see, Mr. President, that our ancestor Daniel was remembered in the will; how valuable the two cob irons were, or what has become of them I do not know. I have tried to find out what kind of houses those first settlers built. I find a vote March 6th, '64-'65: "The town have ordered that every inhabitant of this town shall provide and maintain a sufficient ladder that shall reach to the top of his dwelling house, and another, or two, which, being joined together, shall reach to the top of the barn." So that the houses were not as high as the barns. The first meeting house was a barn-like structure lasting about fifty years. The first school house to be 18x25 feet, and 7 feet betwixt joints. The oldest house now standing in town was built in 1713, and is what I call the second crop of houses. These show good workmanship, and were of two stories, about 20x40 feet, divided into three parts, containing two rooms and a chimney. I never heard that the fireplace was not large enough for the wood, but have heard that the wood was too large for the door of the house. Nearly all the houses built in the first half of the 18th century were of this plan. The house in Middle street, which stood where the present Town Hall stands, and said to have been the first house built in the street, was built by a Marsh. This house stood till 1841, so that I well recollect its second story projecting over the first. The lot was granted to Daniel Marsh in 1686, the house not built until 1713. The old diary to which I have referred, was kept by the owner of this house, and I find these entries in it: "1743, Feb. 28. This day I received deed of Home lot of Mr. Marsh, at 330£; May 17, 1743, Mr. Marsh moved out of my house." This house when first built had small windows of diamond glass, of which I have one light, not a quality which would pass for No. 1 in these days. The cellar was only under one room, and the owner makes record at one time that he has 16 barrels of cider in cellar, 8 of which in rum casks, stand on the north side of cellar. It may have been a short crop, for I find he buys 114 gallons of rum at one time the same year.

The old Marsh house which stood on the Stanley Porter lot was used as a tavern at the time of the Revolution, and a Tory lodged there and the boys tried to smoke him out by covering the top of the chimney, but there was a Hannah there who made them remove it, and protected her guest. In a list of thirty-three families descended from John Marsh, which I have, I find seventeen Hannahs. The three Daniels in town, who married, each took a Hannah for a wife. The longest-lived Marsh was a Daniel, who never married. The next, Joseph, had four wives and outlived them all.

As the old Marsh lot from 1660 had been known by the name of John, so near the last it had three owners by the name of Ebenezer, the last occupant, an Ebenezer, dying a bachelor. The property was divided among his brother's children, and by one of them the old house was torn down in 1821, and the lot sold out of the family.

On two ridges of ground west of the street, is the old cemetery, swept by the fierce blasts of winter, as one writing to me from the west well knew, who had nothing better to give me an idea of the prairie winds than to say, they cut as they do on Hadley meadows. On the west knoll, and midway from north to south in the yard, stands the monument of Daniel Marsh, and those of his sons John, Job, William, and of the two wives of his son Ebenezer, and of children's children to the fourth generation, twenty-four in all; and doubtless a great many unmarked graves. On one stone I read: "Let not the dead forgotten lie, lest living men forget to die"—a text on stone, its audience stones, for they have lain this many a year forgotten and unknown. The monuments to Jonathan and Dorcas, his wife, stand alone in another part of the yard. He had but one son, the Rev. Jonathan, who was probably buried at Windsor, Ct., where he was settled for life. A vast number, scattered far and near, can trace their ancestry back to Jonathan Marsh through his five daughters and their 34 children, and of course far more to John his father, the first Marsh of Hadley.

ADDRESS OF COL. LUCIUS B. MARSH OF BOSTON.

In introducing Col. Marsh, who had been for thirty-eight years a successful merchant in Boston, retiring a few years since, the President particularly requested him to give some account of his military experience and defence of New Orleans during the war, but he modestly omitted it. The editor therefore condenses here a few facts from the Adjutant General's report for 1863.

"The 47th Regiment was recruited chiefly by Lucius B. Marsh, Esq., a well known and respected merchant of Boston, who was elected and commissioned as colonel. The regiment was a part of Gen. Banks' Secret Expedition, a portion of which was under the Col's command and left New York Dec. 22, 1862; sailing under sealed orders, to be opened at sea.

After commanding other posts in defence of New Orleans, La., the Col. was ordered on the 19th of May by Gen. T. W. Sherman to Camp Parapet (the chief defense), to encamp there and assume command of the United States forces stationed there, consisting of portions of the 12th Maine, 4th Wisconsin, 128th New York, 15th New Hampshire, 26th Connecticut, 6th Michigan, and 12th Massachusetts Batteries, Companies B. and C., 1st Regiment H. A. N. Native Guards, two companies 42d Massachusetts, two companies Metropolitan Cavalry, also, temporarily, the 1st Texas Cavalry, and 1st Regiment Engineers Native Guards. The Colonel recruited a company of colored men to be used in the swamps, which became the nucleus of the 2d Regiment of Engineers.

The line of defences was about thirty miles. The immediate defences consisted of the Parapet two and a-half miles long, situated on the east side of the river, running from the Mississippi to the swamps and Lake Ponchartrain, and on the west side of the river Fort Banks, and there was a canal and military road to be guarded and scouted, a distance of twelve to seventeen miles through the swamps to the Lake.

"With a large force of Confederates in front of these defences, this important post was held under peculiar circumstances during the siege of Port Hudson."

The smaller force checkmated the larger, and thus New Orleans was kept safe.

Gen. Sherman made particular mention "of the 47th and its colonel for marked ability" and Gen. Banks was "certain that these arduous sacrifices and honorable triumphs would not be forgotten by the country or the government they helped to preserve."

The second day's session opened with music and the address of the day was made by Hon. Lucius B. Marsh of Boston and follows:

Mr. President, Ladies and Gentlemen:—

Tradition says, that soon after the Battle of Hastings, William the Conqueror made an extended tour through a great portion of England, accompanied by a brilliant staff of both military officers and confidential friends. They followed the roads made long before with much skill and labor by the Romans which now sadly needed repairs. The culverts were many of them out of order, and thus the king's highway "so-called" had formed dams which caused small lakes and ponds of water, which covered the low lands and extended moors. Water and wet lands made up quite a portion of the landscape. As they passed through the country, William's attention was called to these overflowed, low and unproductive lands. It was suggested to him that a comprehensive system of drainage would cure the evil, and make the moors the most productive and valuable lands in the kingdom. This matter of drainage was quite a new thing; the old system was to keep the water from coming in and, "this was to draw the water off and dispose of it." To this far seeing and confidential friend of his staff, William, intrusted this important work. Without going farther into detail, I would say, that this man wherever he went in his official capacity, was known as the Marsh man; and that he showed capacity sufficient to accomplish this great work of internal improvement in England there is no doubt.

The very best lands, the most productive, and the most valuable, and the beautiful landscapes, the verdant fields and lovely valleys, that call forth such admiration from the travelers as the swiftly passing train takes him on his journey! Can one believe that these now so beautiful, were once the moors, the bogs, the constantly wet low lands of no value, but unhealthy as well as unsightly? All this change was accomplished by the brain work of William the Conqueror's confidential friend and his successors, who became known throughout the realm, as the Marsh man, and finally by the name of Marsh. Did we originate from this man? I cannot say. If so, I am not ashamed of our ancestor.

Tradition says that three or four brothers came from England early in the 17th century, about 1630, by the name of Marsh. One settled in Salem, one in Hingham, one in Connecticut, and accounts of the fourth differ, some thinking that he returned to England. Our historians here present agree that this cannot be true as to the brotherhood.

I think, however, that though not true strictly to the letter, still there is something in it. Certainly three young men by the name of Marsh did come from England to this country; one, John, from whom the speaker descended, came to Salem in 1633 or 1634. Another John came to this country within a year or two of the same time, and finally settled in Connecticut, and one George came at nearly the same time and settled in Hingham. I shall try to show that these three men were at least in the old country closely connected by blood as well as by name.

First, the family look can at once be seen in the face, the forehead, the shape of the top of the head, the nose, the chin, the expression of the mouth, the carriage of the body, as well as the expression of the eyes and the arch of the eyebrow, and the firm step. In fact, as the Jew knows the Jew in all countries, speaking all languages, anywhere and everywhere, so the descendants of these three men, John the first, John the second and George, have those distinctive features that are easily known and recognized everywhere in those of mature age. I do not think all have each of these marked features, but sufficient to identify a family likeness. I recognize the fact that this similarity has existed in this country for 250 years. How many years, think you, did it exist in the old country from which we came? I conclude, therefore that without positive proof of relationship of these three men, still the circumstantial evidence to which I have alluded and the evidence all around us to-day, speaks to each of us of one common origin. My father is only the fifth generation from Zachariah, the first son of the John of Salem, and all the line down they have looked the same. I show you the likeness of some of them, and the children of John the second and of George of Hingham will, I have no doubt, agree with me as to the correctness of the family likeness.

I see no good reason, therefore, why these two men may not have been brothers, and one a cousin, or that all three were cousins. One thing is true beyond a doubt, that strength and vitality of body, as well as brain of the ancestors of these three men, were most wonderful in infusing, through them all, the peculiarities that I have spoken of, that have continued through at least five generations, and appear distinctly to this day. Our witty poet, Oliver Wendell Holmes, when asked, "When should the physical training of a child commence?" replied, "One hundred years before the child is born." May not this be indeed true with our ancestors? How has it showed itself in our families? Our ancestors in England must have been very perfect men, sound in body, pure in morals, with clear untainted blood, with an unclouded brain; and our ancestors in this country have on the whole been worthy descendants of such honored sires. If time would permit I could submit a list of many whose lives have been extended far beyond the usual ages of men. Let me speak of John my ancestor and his wife and children, the state of the times in which they lived and the peculiar phases of society.

The colony at Cape Ann in 1623 and 1624, under the charge of Mr. Robert Conant, removed to a fruitful neck of land called Naumkeag, now Salem. This colony was almost a total failure. In fact, in order to save "by occupation" the lands granted by the patents, known as the Dorchester company, it became necessary that another colony should be formed, a new charter be obtained, and men of wealth and influence interested.

Mr. White, the father of the first colony saw that in case a new colony with the requisites above stated, was not at once formed, all the work which was now being abandoned by his associates would be lost. He wrote to Mr. Conant, faithfully promising that if he and three others, viz., John Woodbury, John Balch, and Peter Palfreys, would remain at Naumkeag, he would obtain a patent and forward men and supplies; this was agreed to. They soon after became disengaged, and were ready to break this agreement. They were finally persuaded by Mr. Conant to remain and wait the providence of God. Mr. Woodbury was sent to England for supplies, thus the breath of life was continued in the colony, and Conant and his companions remained, the sentinels of Puritanism on the Bay of Massachusetts.

Mr. White was working successfully in England and obtained a patent March 19th, 1628, conveying to Sir Henry Roswell, Sir John Young, Thomas Southcote, John Humphrey, John Endicott, and Simon Whitecomb, "all that part of New England lying between three miles to the north of the Merrimac, and three miles to the south of the Charles river, and of every part thereof, in the Massachusetts bay," and in length between the described breadth, from the Atlantic ocean to the South sea.

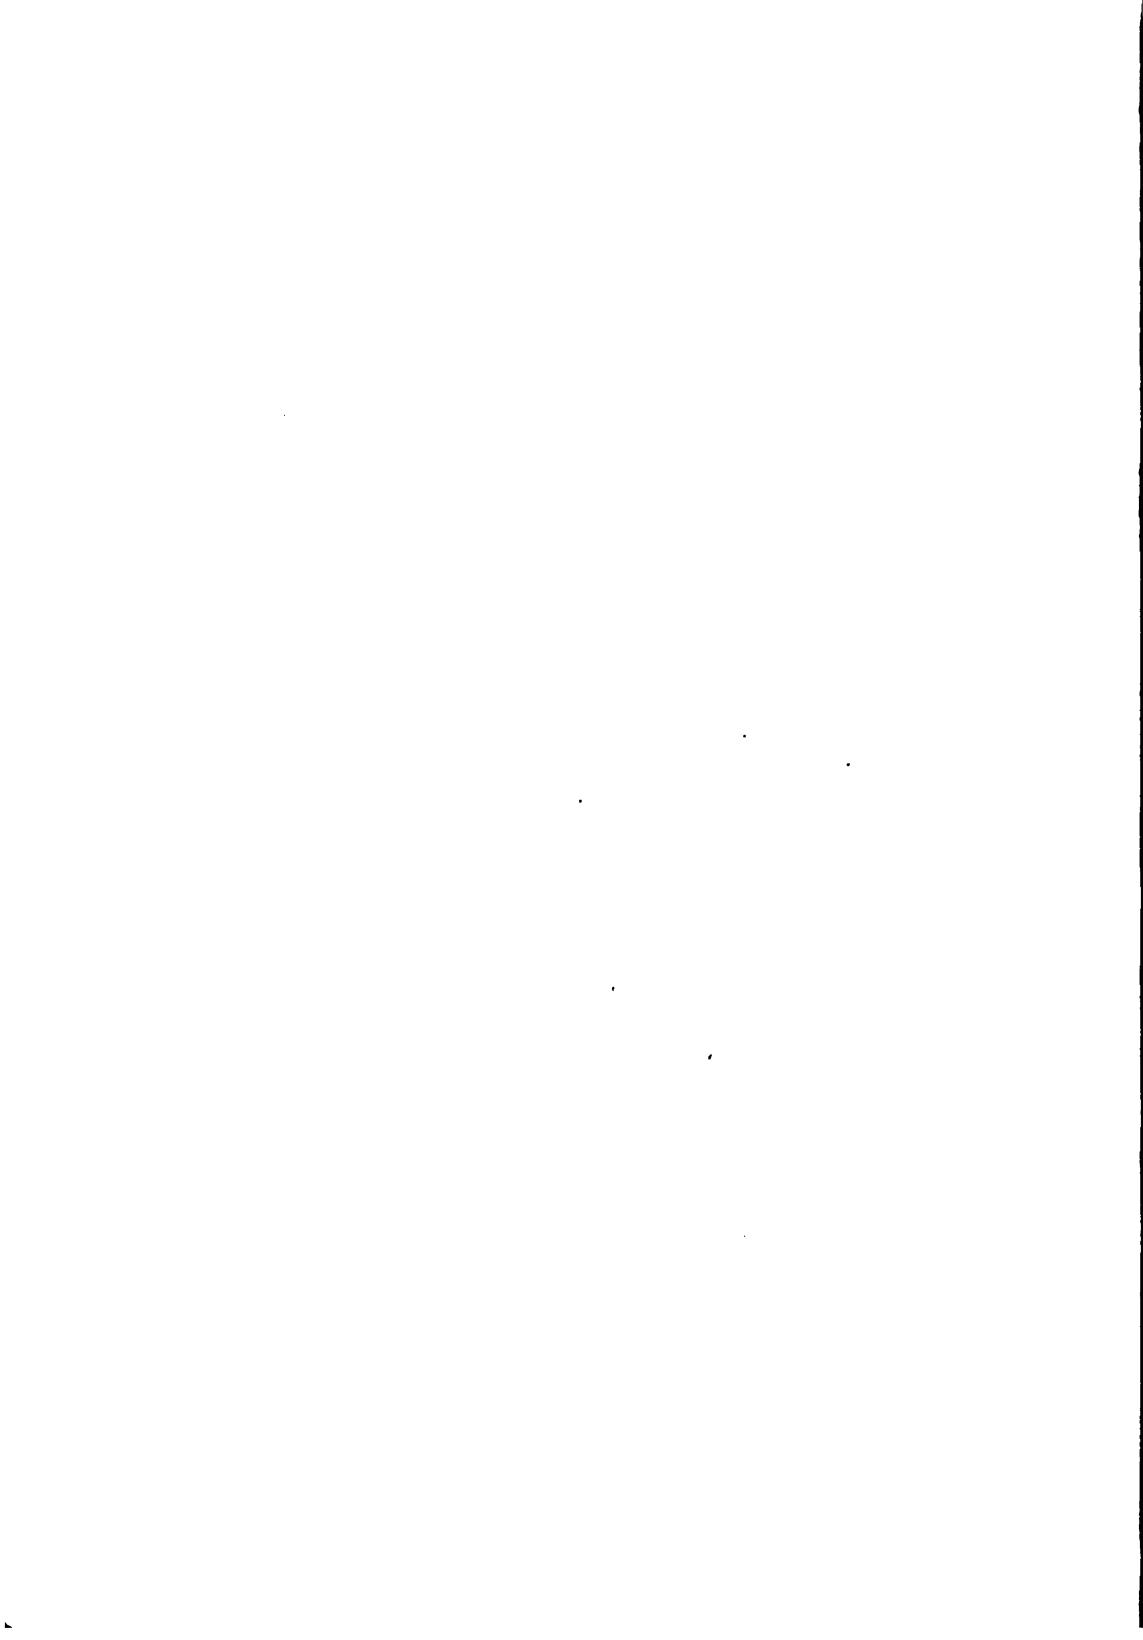

Mr. White being himself invincible to all opposition, several merchants of London, of wealth and reputation, were induced to become partners in the adventure. The first three of the original patentees withdrawing, the rest purchased, or assumed their rights, formed a company which was afterwards known as the Massachusetts company, and organized by choosing Matthew Cradock for governor of the company, with a board of assistants, who were the chief officers of the company after its incorporation under the royal charter, May 30, 1628.

John Endicott, Esq., a Puritan of the sternest mould, yet possessing many excellent traits, manifested much willingness to accept their offer as soon as it was tendered, and he was appointed governor of the plantation. The last of June, 1628, he embarked in the Abigail, "Henry Gaunden, master," accompanied by his wife. Not more, and perhaps less than fifty persons accompanied him. These and some others connected with his family, and the old planters under Conant, in all did not exceed one hundred persons. A few frame houses and log huts, not sufficient to accommodate less than 100 people, constituted the buildings in Salem. Gov. Endicott arrived in Salem, Sept. 6, 1628. The first frame house put up in Salem, as is supposed, was placed there by Gov. Endicott, very soon after his arrival. The house formerly stood in Cape Ann, and was put up by the Dorchester company.

The new company in London, with ample means, commenced a grand and comprehensive system of active work in the different parts of the kingdom. They could not advertise in newspapers, as we do. They were dependent upon other means. The most plausible and gifted speakers were employed to personally address the masses, fully setting forth all the ins, and carefully avoiding the outs, incident to migration, in giving up all the comforts of home, for the uncertainty of making a new home in the deserts of Massachusetts. Many promises were made, among others that every family should have a deed of 20 acres of land, and 10 additional acres for each healthy child. This, no doubt, was the great inducement which led so many of the poorer and well to do classes to give up the old, and seek a new home here. Governor Endicott was very wise in selecting his staff of officers, to assist him in all the departments of the government, particularly in selecting the man for the ministerial office, whose duties were to gather and organize a church and be its pastor. His choice was Rev. Samuel Skelton, of Lincolnshire. Of him it is said, he was of gracious speech, and full of faith. No doubt his eloquence and power of utterance, and his full faith in God and the work of the colony, had much to do with his and his co-laborers' success, for mainly through their efforts emigrants had been secured sufficient for a fleet of eight ships, among which were the George, the Talbot, and the Lion's Whelp. These three were to sail first, Mr. Skelton and family, "wife and two daughters," in the George, Mr. Higginson with his family and Mr. Smith in the Talbot, and Mr. Bright in the Lion's Whelp. Permission from the Lords' treasurer was obtained for the departure of 60 women and maids, 26 children and 300 men; also about 180, supposed to have been servants; with arms and tools and 140 head of cattle. The George sailed May 4, and arrived in Salem June 23, 1629. Thus the London Plantation in the Massachusetts bay in New England, with Gov. John Endicott, was the first permanent successful colony or plantation in Salem and its vicinity, which in a few years led to a union of the pilgrims and the Puritans. The great wealth and respectability of the latter, and their character for active business, their motto being to push things, soon established a united colony with Gov. Winthrop as its chief magistrate. Rev. Samuel Skelton and family, resided, it is said, in a log hut, or unfinished building, 20x22, with three rooms. He commenced his work as a Christian minister. He organized a church July 30th, and August 6th the deacons chosen were ordained. Mr. Skelton was ordained pastor and Mr. Higginson was ordained teacher. There were 30 members. This is the first church of the Puritans, and the second Independent Congregational church, in America.

Will you please allow me to take up the warp and scattered thread of history and weave in my own filling, showing character, conditions and habits of the people.

Early in the summer of 1634 there were but few streets laid out in Salem. Log houses abounded, of every size and quality, one story high, with sharp thatched roofs, large stone chimneys and fire-places, usually containing three rooms beside the attic; usual size 16x20, the larger size 18x22 and 24 and some 20x26 feet. Here the well-to-do and the poor resided, the rich and the noble also occupied them until frame houses could be built. The people of the whole town were eager at work, sawing lumber and boards in the saw pits. But few frame houses were yet to be seen. One prominent for its size was owned and occupied by Gov. Endicott. Women and girls were seen everywhere cultivating ground attached to their humble houses. They were making a garden for vegetables. A few flowers could be seen here and there, showing that they had not lost their taste for the beautiful even in their poverty. They had cheerful faces and the children looked happy. There was a cluster of houses and buildings near the Clean Gravel beach, now Derby wharf. The water was clear, deep and bold, and the largest ships could anchor near the shore. There were no wharves. Salem harbor is well protected on the north by the towns of Beverly, Manchester and Gloucester, on the east by an island now called Lowell island, on the south by Marblehead. On the top of its high hill there is a beacon which signals all vessels as they approach the harbor. The signal is up, the news flies swiftly through the town. The wind is southeast, with a fresh breeze.

It is about 4 o'clock p. m., and soon a sail is seen off Marblehead's outward point. One of the company's officials quickly passes, and says the ship will be here at anchor in about an hour. The people leave their work and all, men, women and children hasten to the beach, the people gathering to welcome the coming ship, and greet the many friends who may be on board, some of them long expected, also they want the letters from near relatives and dear friends that are in England. The crowd gathers until every person of every station in life seems to be present, crowding on the beach near where the ship will cast its anchor, and land its passengers in boats, as there are no wharves. Among all classes of people, we notice first the refined, educated and well-to-do class. Although most of them are living in log houses with the scantiest amount of furniture, they are neatly dressed, and their faces are bright and hopeful, for with them it is only a matter of time when they shall unpack their furniture, now in the company's store house, and have it placed in the comely dwellings soon to be erected for their new, beautiful homes. The next class are apparently farmers in more rustic and well patched garments; they have an independent, business-like way with them, and their faces betoken confidence in themselves, and in the future. The next class are the mechanics and the laboring people, who work for themselves or for wages. They seem somewhat excited, yet happy; they are coarsely clothed, their garments clean, but well worn, the women many of them have no shoes on, and some wear the wooden shoe. A few wear nothing on their heads, the dark skin and straight hair, bright eyes, and comely features and healthy countenances, and quiet demeanor, indicating that some of the young Indian women have become the wives of the white man.

The crowd is parting, some distinguished persons will soon be seen, the men seem to be gathering on one side and the women and children on the other. The men raise their hats or their hands to their heads, and make a respectful bow. The women put their right hands on their breast and make a low courtesy. Two persons now approach.

- One is in appearance some 55 years old, with a hectic flush on his face, walking feebly. His face and bearing show that he is a gentleman, his dress indicates that he is a clergyman, his waist coat covers his body, his small clothes from the waist are quite loose to the knee, and fastened there by large black buckles, his stockings are long and black, his shoes are high about the ankle, with high heels and pointed at the toe, with large black buckles on the top of the shoe, his over-coat is loose from his neck, with a flat cape like a collar and close fitting sleeves, and he has a large, high, white ruffle tied closely around his neck.

By his side is a beautiful young woman apparently about 22 years old. She is a little above the medium height, with dark hair parted in the middle and carried back loosely and fastened on the top of her head with a cable-cord-like braid, revealing a broad high forehead, an intelligent face, a bright dark blue eye; her countenance shows mingled joy and anxiety. A tear tells that she has a deep sorrow for her mother, which in the hour of her gladness cannot be entirely repressed. Her well developed form and stately bearing show that she is a lady first in rank and social position. Her dress is of Queen Elizabeth style, extreme long waist pointed in front, with belt fastened by a buckle; the skirt full over the hips and flowing nearly to the ground, pointed-toed shoes with high heels, a high ruffle around her neck fastened loosely in front, tight sleeves and ruffles on her wrist, with only one ornament upon her person, a plain gold ring upon her left forefinger. The gentleman at her side is emaciated and feeble. Yet the likeness could not be mistaken, she must be, she is his daughter, and they gaze intently and lovingly into each other's faces and then at the ship that has already rounded the point, and is making swift progress towards the landing.

A third party now joins them with pleasant greetings. His face when once seen can never be forgotten, every feature shows that he is no ordinary man. He is of medium height, dressed as in the days of Henry the 8th—his brown velvet coat and small clothes with long stockings, high cut shoes and high heels and silver buckles, his long vest covering his body and carefully fitted to his person, his hat not unlike the Dutch hat of the times in shape, but not in stiffness, soft, and of the best material. Some very pleasant words are spoken, showing that they are on the most intimate terms. He is very complimentary and mentions the becoming dress of the young lady.

The gentleman replies that this was his departed wife's dress and has not been worn since their marriage, except on one or two occasions; that his daughter, who was nearly the same size, and so much resembled her mother, was persuaded to put it on now for the first time. He went on saying: "The one we expect so soon to see and welcome, saw this costume upon my dear wife, at your reception in Lincolnshire, at the time you desired me to become a member of your council and the minister to this colony."

"Ah, I do remember it well, and how beautiful she was! and her bearing how dignified and queenly! and in all truth and frankness, I must say the mother and daughter look the same, only the mother showed a little more years, but hardly any more maturity in form or dignity of bearing. She does not hear a word I have said. No, no, her mind is intent on one she expects in a few moments to see."

Then the anchor is cast off, the flood tide is swinging the noble ship that has borne so many precious lives across the mighty ocean, and now on her stern can plainly be seen and they read her name, "Mary and John," while the bow and side of the ship are filled and crowded with passengers. The eyes of the three are steadily gazing.

"Can it be possible that he has not come? is he sick or has he died on the passage, or did he conclude to give me up?" thought the young woman, as the tears flowed over her face. "That is he, that is he!" said the happy young lady, as she wiped away her tears.

"That is your John, I mean our John," said the father.

"That is indeed your John," said the gentleman by her side, with a voice showing his deep sympathy. Then taking the hand of the father and of the daughter, he said, "I wish you much joy, my dear friends."

There stood on the quarter deck a young man who at once recognized them; taking off his hat he bowed very low three times. Many boats had now surrounded the good ship "Mary and John" and were fast taking the passengers to the shore. What a meeting as each boat landed! Friends and loved ones, parents and children, brothers and sisters, wives and husbands, each and all were seeking and embracing each other. There were some heart-rending cries of those who had come so far across the water to find that their loved ones had died, and of others who were told how their dear ones had died on the passage, and been buried in the sea; and many sad letters were received telling of sickness and death beyond the seas.

In a few moments a boat was nearing the shore, the splendid form of a stalwart young man leaped on the beach, and the first footprints of a Marsh had now been made on this continent. With a firm step, but respectful demeanor, with uncovered head, revealing a broad and high forehead, well balanced with benevolence and firmness, with dark steady eyes showing that he was kind and generous but not to be trifled with, he approached the little group who had come to the water's edge to meet and bid him welcome. The clergyman, for he was Rev. Samuel Skelton, clasping the young man's hand, in his feebleness could hardly stand, but was firmly and tenderly held up by the powerful hand of the young man, while with a calm but tremulous voice and tearful eyes he bade Mr. John welcome to his new home in the wilderness and to the warm loving hearts ready to receive him. The young man turns and in a moment gives the old Norman salutation, warm kisses on each cheek, as he whispers, "My dearest Susanna." Turning to the third party of the little group he saw the extended hand, which he clasped and said, "My obedience, Governor Endicott," who quickly in his business-like way replied, "You are indeed welcome, Mr. John."

At the quiet residence of the clergyman, Mr. Skelton freely talked with Mr. John and informed him that he had selected for him his quota of land 20 acres some little distance from the village, which he regarded as most desirable. The soil was most excellent, it was well covered with a valuable forest and had also water power. The title would be confirmed in their London companies office, as soon as he had made his entry at this office, and erected some buildings and occupied the same with a wife. That he had arranged with the company for additional grants or purchases, so that he could increase his 20 acres to any number should he so desire, that he had not unpacked his furniture, which was in the company's store house. Since Mrs. Skelton had died, with his own failing health and the many cares incident to his office, he had no heart to make any change.

" And now Mr. John we are very, very glad to see you. We have constantly thought about you and fully remembered all your manly and truthful qualities while you were my pupil at Lincolnshire, that so endeared you to all of us. Mrs. Skelton longed to see you. She often said that you seemed to her already a son, and she loved to think of you as such. She left us March 15, 1631, and passed on to her heavenly home. We had a most severe cold winter, there were many sick; and out of our little number eighty had died. Mrs. Skelton spent her whole time in visiting the sick and afflicted, comforting the dying, as only a devoted Christian woman can do. The people were not satisfied with the church prayer book. They wanted warm sympathy, and prayer that came fresh from a loving heart. This Mrs. Skelton gave until worn out, her strength exhausted, she sickened and passed on to the better life, March 15, 1631. Susanna has devoted herself in trying to take her mother's place. She is loved by all in this little village. Gov. Endicott greatly desired that we should have a better and more comfortable home to dwell in. Each of us said, Nay, nay, we will live as most of our people do, and keep in full sympathy with them, in their joys and sorrows. The house for God's worship has not yet been commenced, we had rather remain in this loghouse where we have lived since we reached this shore and I became the minister to this people."

Only a short time and illness and feebleness increased and Mr. Skelton died August 2, 1634, and thus closed his ministry in peace.

As was the custom, the marriage of John and Susanna was deferred. In the meantime his farm was put under cultivation, a small frame house was built, which was enlarged from time to time. In the autumn of 1635 they were married.

A few days since I was in the building in Salem, claimed to be the first building occupied by the first church. " This is a mistake, as the church occupied one or more buildings, probably log houses, from 1629 to the time they occupied this house." This church or meeting house in size was 17x20 or 21 feet. I was told that it was occupied in 1634, that the first pastors were Francis Higginson, 1629 to 1630; Samuel Skelton, 1629 to 1634; Roger Williams, 1631 to 1635. The statement that all these men preached in this house is an error. Neither of them ever officiated or held public worship in this house, and for this simple reason, "It was not built."

Also Rev. Francis Higginson died August 6, 1630, Rev. Samuel Skelton died August 2, 1634, and Roger Williams was banished from Salem early in 1635. This house is said to have been built and occupied in 1634 but the facts are, the contract for building this meeting house was made November, 1634, the trees were cut in the winter of 1635 for the material, and the building was erected during that year 1635. The glazed windows were added in 1637. There are two tablets placed lately in the church for the first pastors. On the first tablet the first name, as the first pastor, is Rev. Francis Higginson 1629 to 1630, when in fact Mr. Higginson never was pastor, but only teacher. He held that office from August 6, 1629 to August 6, 1630, just 12 months to a day, and he really could have done but little teaching. His time was too valuable to the company for mere teaching as a constant correspondent for the London company and writer of letters which were published and scattered broadcast over England, and they produced mighty results, as can be seen by the large number who were thus induced to emigrate. He was a mighty man in speech, and also with his pen. I do him all honor for his great usefulness, I would not say one word to lessen his fame, for it can hardly be overestimated. I regret to see his name on the head of the tablet in that church to an office that history shows he never held. Samuel Skelton was the pastor appointed July 30, and ordained August 6, 1629, and Mr. Higginson was appointed and ordained the same day as teacher, and Roger Williams was chosen teacher or assistant to Mr. Skelton after the death of Mr. Higginson in 1630, and succeeded to the pastorate after the death of Mr. Skelton August 2, 1634.

As I reverently stood in that little 17x21 feet building "enlarged about 1639 to 17x42," memories of the past came over me. In thought I saw that little church crowded. It was Feb. 28, 1637. At the proper stage of the services, John and Susanna Marsh brought to the baptismal font a baby boy, "he may have been several months old." The minister took the child and said as the congregation rose to their feet, and as he applied the water, "Brethren this is Zachariah Marsh the grandson of our late beloved Pastor Skelton."

The usual congratulations were tendered at the close of the service. This child was the first Marsh born in this country. This scene was repeated in the same little church in 1639, March 19th, for the 2d child John. Then here came :

In 1641, March 5th, the 3d child, Ruth.
 In 1644, , the 4th child, Benjamin.
 In 1646, Dec. 3d, the 5th child, Elizabeth.
 In 1648, Sept. 24th, the 6th child, Ezekiel.
 In 1650, Aug. 1st, the 7th child, Bethiah.
 In 1652, Sept. 2d, the 8th child, Samuel.
 In 1654, March 7th, the 9th child, Susanna.
 In 1656, Aug. 14th, the 10th child, Mary.
 In 1659, Feb. 16th, the 11th child, Jacob.

These baptisms covered the space of 22 years, and 227 years have passed since then.

This great panorama passed before my vision, and I said where are they and all that witnessed these interesting services? They are gone. But their descendants? Some are here to-day, and thousands are scattered all over our land, and over the world, making I trust the world better for having lived.

" For we are the same our fathers have been :
 We see the same sights our fathers have seen ;
 We drink the same stream and view the same sun,
 And run the same course our fathers have run.

The thought we are thinking our fathers would think ;
 From the death we are shrinking, our fathers would shrink ;
 To the life we are clinging, they also would cling ;
 But it speeds for us all like a bird on the wing.

They loved, but the story we cannot unfold ;
 They scorned, but the heart of the haughty is cold ;
 They grieved, but no wail from their slumbers will come ;
 They joyed, but the tongue of their gladness is dumb.

They died ; ay! they died, and we things that are now,
 Who walk on the turf that lies o'er their brow,
 Who make, in their dwelling, a transient abode,
 Meet the things that they met on their pilgrimage road.

Yea! hope and despondency, pleasure and pain,
 We mingle together in sunshine and rain ;
 And the smiles and the tears, the song and the dirge,
 Still follow each other, like surge upon surge.

"Tis the wink of an eye, 'tis the draught of a breath,
From the blossom of health to the paleness of death;
From the gilded saloon to the bier and the shroud—
Oh, why should the spirit of mortal be proud?"

John Marsh sailed from England in 1698 and arrived in Salem early in 1634. His son Zachariah, Married Dec. 15, 1664, Mary Silsbee "dau. of Henry Silsbee of Salem." They had nine children, six boys and three girls. We descended from the seventh child, Ezekiel, born in 1680 died 1750. Married Rebecca Gould July 1, 1702. They had six children, three boys and three girls. We descended from the second child, Ezekiel born and bap. May 27, 1711. Married in 1782 to Sarah Buffington who was born 1716 and died 1809. He died 1798, 88 years old. They had five children three boys and 2 girls. Their fourth child John was born May 26, 1750. This commences a separate line of our family as to-day here represented. He married Frances Foster of Marblehead, and died July 30, 1778. She died July 27, 1808. They had two sons, both named John; the oldest died in infancy. The second John born Nov. 26, 1778, married Aug. 22, 1798, Mary Brown, born Dec. 28, 1772. They had seven children, five boys and two girls. The third child James born March 7, 1803, married, April 5, 1825, Mary P. Felton, and they have had seven children, one girl and six boys. Hon. James Marsh now in his 84th year, with his wife and gifted daughter Hannah Felton Marsh and two of his stalwart sons, we have the great pleasure of welcoming to-day. Caleb is the fifth child born May 8, 1834. He Married Dec. 31, 1854 Clarie E. Brown, and they have three children and four grandchildren. Francis the other son with us, is their seventh child, born Aug. 18, 1838, married Feb. 13, 1867 to Catherine E. Pope. They own and occupy the house and farm that was my grandfather's residence, where my father was born July 9, 1776, and where I was born April 18, 1818. To go back to the point of union, Ezekiel Marsh to whom I have referred, born May 27, 1711 their ancestor was my great grandfather. He was commissioned by Gov. Wm. Shirley Ensign 5th Regt. Capt. John Proctor, Col. Ichabod Plaisted, Aug. 21, 1754, 28th year of the reign of his Majesty King George 2d. Ezekiel Marsh the son of the above named, born in Danvers Jan. 26, 1740, was my grandfather. He moved to Maine in 1818 and died in Fairfield, Me., Sept. 15, 1822, 88 years old. He was commissioned Lieutenant June 3, 1773 by Governor Thomas Hutchinson in the 13th year of his Majesty King George 3d, omitting to take the usual oath of allegiance. He married Abiah "or Bethiah" Hartshorn of Salem, sister of Captain Thomas Hartshorn who greatly distinguished himself during the war of 1775 to 1783. They had seven children, three boys and four girls. The sixth child Thomas H. Marsh, born July 9, 1776, was my father. He died in Fairfield, Oct. 20, 1870, aged 94 years, 3 months and 11 days. I have Mr. President too full a history of our family to give all now, but at a proper time I will furnish you with more. Thanking you all for your patience and kind attention, let me say that the commissions to which I have referred, can be seen, as I have them here with me. Again thanking you all I will close by saying that I am most happy to be present with you to-day.

HYMN SUNG AT TWO REUNIONS.

TUNE—America.

1633—1885.

From England's sea-girt land
By God's high guiding hand,
Our fathers sailed.
They laughed at ocean's roar,
They found a broader shore,
And here forevermore
They freedom hailed.

John Marsh was one of them,
Those ancient, stalwart men,
Their God their King:
His Bible was his chart,
With wisest master-art,
He put it in his heart
More light to bring.

And George of Hingham came,
And many a queenly dame,
And lovely bride:
And Marshes, as the leaves,
Or golden harvest sheaves,
Or drops that drip from eaves,
They multiplied.

The women toiled and spun,
A daily task was done
By girl and son.
The Marshes grew and spread,
The Marshes loved and wed,
The Marshes fought and bled,
And freedom won.

Now Marsh, be merriest man,
That ever walked or ran,
Or kissed a bride;
For Marshes come and go,
As come the rain and snow,
The Marshes ebb and flow,
A little span.

We boast no nobler name,
No bluer blood we claim,
Lest pride should fall;
Yet love we this our tree,
And come from land and sea
One gathering here to be,
And honor all.

Two hundred years have taught,
That every Marshman ought
To live for right,
To spend his little span
In doing what he can
To serve his God and Man
With all his might.
